Philadelphia, June 1.—The Athletics made enough runs in the second inning to-day to defeat the Nationals by 6 to 1. Eddie Plank, Connie Mack's left-hander, was in splendid form, and held Washington to five hits, which were well scattered to amount to anything in the scoring line, and but for an error by Nichols Washington would have suffered a shut-out.

The Athletics were credited with several hits which they should not have had, the ragged fielding and listless work of the Washington team being a big factor in allowing the Athletics to score six runs in the second inning.

A change of pitchers took place in the third, and although six of the home team's hits were made off Cates, who succeeded Smith in the box, not a run was scored by the Athletics in the last five innings. The Athletics hit the ball hard and often, but most of their efforts in the batting line resulted in grounders, which were handled by the Washington infield, and only one outfield fly was made during the game, Washington having a credit of twenty-two assists.

Little to Entertain Over.

There was a crowd of 4,000 on hand to witness the game, but outside of the second inning there was nothing to entice over. Connie Mack made a change in his batting order, Eddie Collins playing second and batting ahead of Nichols.

Davis started the second with a single, J. Collins hit to McBride, forcing Davis, but DeLoach dropped the bases, and Smith walked Powers, forcing Davis home. Moran forced Powers at second, Collins scoring. Coombs moved to third on the play, and when Plank hit to DeLoach, Coombs was thrown out at the plate. Hartzel walked, and Eddie Collins beat out a hit to DeLoach, Moran scoring. A wild pitch scored Plank and Hartzel, and sent Collins to third, where he scored on Nichols' single. Davis was the third out on his second trip to the plate in this inning.

Escapes Without Score.

J. Collins singled to center, and Coombs and Moran beat out infield hits in the third off Cates, but no runs resulted. Collins being thrown out at third and Coombs at the plate. Two bases on balls and a single were also wasted in the fourth, a double play cutting short their chances. The home team never threatened to score in the remaining innings.

A single and a steal by DeLoach.

With Powers' wild throw, put DeLoach on third, after two were out in the first, but he was left McBride doubled after two were out in the third, and DeLoach and Street opened the fourth with singles, but all these hits were wasted. Cates was hit by a pitched ball, reached second when Nichols dropped E. Collins' throw of Miller's grounder, and scored on Pickering's single. After this Washington was retired in order.
